Chung-dong First Methodist Church, English Ministry—June 2018

The Church I See

I recently read the book Crossing Over by Paul Scanlon in which he tells of the series of transitions his church in Bradford, England went through to become one of the fastest growing churches in the UK today. He tells:

“Our church was twenty-five years old, was quite set in its ways, and had a culture that was introverted, safe, and exclusive... I remember so clearly God asking me, “What kind of church don’t you want?” That was an easier question for me to answer than, “What kind of church do I want?” His question helped me to look closely at what I didn’t like about our church, and the things I didn’t like soon became a small but radical list of things I knew would not easily die.”

He then moves on and lists his observations while visiting churches all over Britain and abroad. He mentions the habit of churches to start late and the tardiness of the people. His commitment was to build a church where services are so dynamic that no one will miss a moment. He also observes that most churches he visited had passionless worship – worship which has been reduced to the few songs dutifully sung prior to the preaching – all on autopilot. His commitment was to build a worshipping church, whose God-filled worship will be awesome and life-changing. A further observation was that people were generally nonresponsive and “dead,” especially during the preached Word. This he interpreted as that people are not excited about church. They are attending church instead of being the church. His commitment: “I will build a church that is exciting to be in.”

After a comprehensive list of observations he faced in the church, his life’s work was slowly unfolding before him. This found its way into his “The Church I See” statements wherein he sets out to cast a vision for the kind of church he believes God wants him to build. “THE CHURCH I SEE is God-centered, purpose-driven, and people-empowering. THE CHURCH I SEE is attractive, confident, victorious, and overcoming. It is a church whose powerful proclamation and awesome worship are broadcast to the nations by every modern means possible. THE CHURCH I SEE equips, enables, and releases ordinary people to live extraordinary lives. THE CHURCH I SEE is a deeply committed, loving, caring family amongst whom the lonely and the broken find new hope and belonging.”

As we are celebrating the 21st anniversary of Chungdong EM, I was wondering about the next 21 years. Maybe we should contemplate about what kind of church we don’t want? Describe it in all its breathtaking ugliness; see it from the unchurched point of view; understand how utterly resistible it is to a lost world. And then, let us paint a new picture with the new colors of the church you see. Finally, give ourselves to building that amazing, irresistible church against which the gates of hell cannot possibly prevail.
